According to the dictionary the science of performance levels and limits for working persons and also the best mutual relationship between such persons and their working conditions. Our designers always consider such matters thoroughly. They know just how a workplace needs to be designed so that it can enhance a person's performance as best as possible. They put their ideas into practice in developing chairs and tables for workplaces in the HOME-OFFICE range and the results will help you to perform to your best, too.

A workplace for moving around: height adjustments between 72 cm and 115.5 cm create a much-improved dynamic working environment.

Upper and lower arm should form an angle of 90° or larger. Just like the angle between the thighs and lower legs, where the thighs are positioned horizontally and parallel to the ground. The seat height S and the working height A should be set accordingly.

Working height A is identical to desk height T when there are no changes caused by working tools such as keyboards. In such cases these must be equalised by lowering the desktop correspondingly.

Height setting of monitor. The angle of view should be around 35° below the horizontal in order to ensure that the head is in a relaxed position.

The definitive position.

The human spine is a masterpiece of nature. Our chairs from the ERGOMO office series are masterpieces in their functions, design and craftsmanship. A patented mechanism ensures that the backrest and seat surface of the ERGOMO office O1, O2 and O3 adapt ergonomically perfectly to each user in the way they adopt a linked angled position together. You will notice this in the totally relaxed sitting position you have. Especially when the working day in your HOMEOFFICE lasts a little longer. Nevertheless, you should still stand up from time to time and enjoy the beautiful design of your chair.
